Not Now, Charlie!

This is a story about Charlie, a little engine who loves to make his friends laugh.

Charlie is a playful purple engine. He loves telling jokes!

"What is pink and grey and has four feet?" said Charlie at the Docks one day. "I don't know," said Gordon.

"What is pink and grey and has four feet?"

"An elephant with its tongue sticking out!" smiled Charlie. Gordon laughed. And Charlie chuffed happily away.

But not everyone likes Charlie's jokes. Sometimes the engines are too busy. "Not now, Charlie!" they say.

One day, Charlie was on his way to pick up some trucks when he had a big surprise.

There, on the tracks, was a great big elephant! Charlie didn't know there were any elephants on Sodor.

"That elephant is in danger. I must do something!" cried Charlie. He blew his whistle as loudly as he could.

"PEEP! PEEP!" But the elephant didn't move.

"I must fetch help!" said Charlie.

Charlie puffed round a bend and saw Thomas.

“Stop, Thomas! STOP!” Charlie called out.

Thomas thought it was another one of Charlie’s jokes.

“Not now, Charlie!” he said, grumpily. “Your jokes are going to make me late.” And he steamed away.

When Percy puffed by, he thought Charlie was joking too. “Not now, Charlie!”

said Percy.

Just then, Charlie spotted a fallen tree on the tracks up ahead. It had knocked down a wall – the wall to the Animal Park!

“The elephant must have escaped!” said Charlie.

Charlie rushed to Brendam Docks to tell everyone about the elephant. But no one believed him. “It’s just another one of Charlie’s jokes,” Thomas sighed.

Charlie sped away feeling silly. He had to find someone who would help him.

Charlie puffed to the Sodor Search and Rescue Centre. Harold listened to Charlie's tale about the elephant, and Harold believed Charlie.

"This is an emergency!" Harold buzzed.

At the Animal Park the park keepers were mending the wall, but the elephant wasn't there.

Charlie and Harold went to search for the elephant.

Before long, Harold spotted it near the Docks and radioed for help.

The park keepers guided the elephant carefully onto Charlie's special truck. Then Charlie puffed proudly to the Animal Park to take the elephant home.

The Fat Controller was waiting there to meet him. "Well done, Charlie!" he said. "You are a Really Useful Engine."

Charlie beamed. He decided not to tell any more jokes for a while. But, of course, that didn't last long!

Henry's Hero

This is a story about Henry and Hiro, two of the biggest, strongest engines on Sodor.

Henry and Hiro are both very strong engines. They can pull very heavy loads. One day, they were filling their tenders with coal, ready for the day's work. They had to collect a heavy load from the Quarry to take to the Docks. But as they set off, the steam from Hiro's funnel began to look very dirty.

"Hiro! There's dark smoke coming from your funnel!"
Henry called.

"Yours too!" Hiro called back, as they clattered to a stop.

Just then Duck rolled past, pulling empty trucks. "Oh dear," he said when he saw Henry and Hiro. "It looks like you two have had some of the bad coal. It arrived today. I've been sent to collect fresh coal." And he puffed away.

"Maybe we should wait for the fresh coal?" Henry said.

"We need to be Really Useful Engines," Hiro replied.
"While we have steam we can still run on this coal."

But Henry was worried. He wanted to wait for the good clean coal. He uncoupled himself from the train.

Now Hiro had to pull the train all by himself. He tried his best to move the trucks, it was very hard work. Thick black smoke poured from his funnel.

As Hiro huffed on, the smell of dirty smoke got worse. But there was no time to stop for fresh coal. Hiro was determined to get his job done on time.

When he got to the Docks, The Fat Controller was waiting. "I need you go to the Smelter's Yard to collect some heavy iron girders. Henry will be your back engine."

The Fat Controller didn't know about the bad coal.

At the Smelter's Yard, Henry was surprised to see Hiro. "Did you pull those trucks without fresh coal?" he asked.

"Yes," said Hiro. "It wasn't easy, but sometimes you have to keep on puffing."

And so they did. Heaving and huffing, they set off with the train of heavy iron girders. But as they reached Gordon's Hill, there was a very strange noise.

"My firebox is blocked!" cried Hiro. Hiro had broken down!

"Don't worry, Hiro," smiled Henry. "You taught me to keep on puffing, so that is what I'm going to do."

Henry clunked and clanked. His wheels were wobbly and his axles ached. But he kept on puffing. Slowly they started to move up the hill. Henry was pushing the heavy train and Hiro!

Everyone clapped as Henry puffed into the Docks. “Hooray!” they cheered. Henry was a hero! That night, with fresh coal, Henry and Hiro felt much better.

“You were right, Hiro,” smiled Henry. “Sometimes you can keep puffing, even with bad coal.”

“But it’s much nicer with good clean coal!” Hiro laughed.

Thomas' Shortcut

This is a story about Thomas and Bertie, who think racing is great fun!

One fine morning, Thomas was pulling Annie and Clarabel along his branch line when Bertie came driving along the road next to them. "Hello, slowcoach!" laughed Bertie.

"I'm not slow!" huffed Thomas, and he sped off.

Thomas arrived at the station two minutes early. When Bertie rolled in beside him he joked, "It's a good job I hurried you, or you would have been late!"

Thomas frowned. "I'm not slow and I'm never late!" he said crossly. "Let's have a race. I'll show you."

Thomas and Bertie love to race! Sometimes Bertie is quicker – especially when there are sheep on the line! And sometimes Thomas is quicker – when Bertie has to stop at traffic lights.

“PEEP! PEEP!” said Thomas, as he whooshed into a tunnel. But when he came out again, Bertie was already waiting at the finish line. Bertie was the winner!

“Do you want to know my secret?” said Bertie. “I’ve been rerouted,” he smiled. “Now I take a shortcut.”

That night in the sheds, Thomas was telling Percy and Edward all about Bertie's shortcut. "So now Bertie always wins," moaned Thomas.

Suddenly an idea flew into Percy's funnel. "Why don't you take a shortcut, Thomas?"

Thomas thought that was an excellent idea! But his coaches didn't. "You might miss a station," warned Clarabel.

But Thomas wouldn't listen. "If Bertie can take a shortcut, then so can I," he puffed.

The next day, Thomas pulled into Dryaw Station just as Bertie was arriving.

Thomas waited for his passengers to get off. Then he rushed away as fast as his wheels would carry him.

He soon reached a junction. "Maybe this way is a shortcut?" Thomas wondered.

Thomas took the left track instead of the right one, but the track just looped back to where he had started from.

Later that day, Thomas found an old rusty track that led into the woods. "This must be a shortcut!" Thomas smiled.

But it wasn't! Thomas raced on and – BASH! – he crashed straight through some rotten buffers. Thomas couldn't stop and his two front wheels came right off the track.

His passengers were cross. Now they were going to be very late indeed.

Just then, Bertie rolled by. Thomas told him what had happened. "I can take your passengers for you," said Bertie.

That evening, Harvey the Crane Engine came to get Thomas back on the tracks.

The Fat Controller spoke sternly to Thomas. "You have caused confusion and delay," he said.

Thomas was very sorry. He promised to stay on his branch line and not take any more shortcuts from then on.

But Thomas and Bertie still like to have races, and sometimes Thomas even wins!

Seasons
on Sodor

Winter Wonderland

Winter is a busy time on the Island of Sodor. The weather is cold and sometimes it snows. The engines must keep chuffing hard so that their axles don't ice up!

The Steamies deliver trucks of coal all over the Island to make sure that everyone can keep warm.

But the trucks aren't always filled with coal!

Really Useful Engines keep puffing whatever the weather!

How many snowmen can you count here?

Sometimes the engineers make snowmen too!

The children on the Island

Thomas always wears his snowplough when heavy snow has fallen. He learnt his lesson a long time ago when a tractor called Terence had to pull Thomas out of a snowdrift!

What do

Do you

Each year, there is a special winter party. The engines love to fetch decorations to make the Island look festive.

What

Sometimes the engines are decorated
